

People are servants, money is used

This may seem like a no-brainer, but in recent articles I've seen a lot of people being controlled by money.

In my case,

I maximize the value of money (like employees) and don't let it go to waste...

If the amount of money considered an employee is high → large company

If the amount of money considered an employee is low → small/medium-sized enterprises

Employees - servants = 0

In this case, a "single-man" like me will appear.

In the work

Because he is a servant who knows everything

"Hmm... I send them out to do errands and don't let them play."

"Hmm... I'm always watching them and I notice."

Many wealthy people use their money well through investments, etc., but simply increasing savings without a plan is not good for you.

If you have a specific plan for the future, it's important to think about how much money you need to achieve it.

- ② Retirement funds
- ② Children's tuition fees, etc.

Regarding ①, consider your own physical condition and how many years you have left in terms of your healthy life expectancy.

Regarding ②, as is the case now, opportunities for university admission are not limited to high school seniors (although some people retake exams).

In this day and age, there's no problem with taking the exam even after entering the workforce.

If you're planning to purchase a specific product, make sure you have the money, and then just worry about living expenses.

Finally...don't be an employee, a servant used for money.
