

A brief explanation of USW society

Japanese companies' retained earnings (retained profits) continue to increase, exceeding 600 trillion yen in fiscal year 2023 and 637 trillion yen in fiscal year 2024, marking a new record high for the 13th consecutive year. Over the past 20 years, this represents an increase of more than 300 trillion yen, and strong business performance has led to a significant increase in cash and cash equivalents, particularly among large companies.

Purpose of retained earnings:

- ① Savings for future capital investment
- ② Savings to be available in times of corporate crisis

My explanation of USW society, which I often use, is on the next page.

USW Society

- ① Guaranteeing the current welfare benefit amount for all Japanese citizens
- ② Based on the current total amount of retained earnings of domestic companies (see previous page), implement a system that sets an upper limit according to the following guidelines.

From the original purpose of retained earnings:

- (1) Statistical analysis of the amount of retained earnings generated by companies in situations where the circumstances described on the previous page occurred in the past.

(Statistical survey method)

* By company size

* By industry

- (1)Based on the statistical figures, the average amount of retained earnings generated is estimated.

Furthermore, an upper limit is set for various existing investment operations from a safety perspective.

Taking the above into consideration, the portion exceeding the upper limit will be collected as a newly established account in the national treasury. If there is a shortfall in the actual amount provided individually, support will be provided by the national treasury as a special grant that does not require repayment, upon application.

(Basis for the above statement)

Article 25 of the Japanese Constitution

This article stipulates the right of all citizens to maintain the minimum standards of wholesome, humane, and cultured living, and the State has the obligation to strive to achieve and improve this right. The public assistance system is a concrete manifestation of this principle.

By reinterpreting the above article as guaranteeing the livelihood of all citizens, this becomes possible without going through procedures such as constitutional amendment.

This statement, as the opinion of one citizen, will be mailed at a later date as a policy proposal.

From a security standpoint, accepting document censorship is perfectly reasonable.

By the way, it ends with "Therefore, this proposal has been approved."

Japan has a parliamentary system... It is approved by the representatives (parliamentarians) elected by the people themselves, and that is only natural.

Also, by the way, there is no doubt that self-employed people tend to be more positive mentally,

- ② They think about work even on their days off
- ② I have actually seen people who think that even if it fails, they can just start over from scratch. They have confidence in their experience because they have built it from scratch.

Even for regular corporate employees, being able to confidently express opinions with a sense of participation in management is important in life.
